Claim the Expense in the Year of Payment:

The year in which the payment was made determines when an expense qualifies. If the educational service or material was received in a year different than the year of payment, you may only claim the qualifying expense for the year in which the payment was made. This applies to both the subtraction and credit.

Determining year of payment for financed expenses

If you receive a loan from your local bank or use a third-party credit card to pay your qualifying expenses, your expenses are considered fully paid when you make the initial purchase.

The opposite is true if you purchased a qualifying expense on credit directly from a retailer (such as a non-third-party credit card). In this case, your purchase is not fully paid when you make the initial purchase. Rather, each payment you make to the retailer is considered a separate expense.

Example 1. Tammy bought a computer several years ago on credit using her personal credit card, and she's still making payments on this purchase. In this case, because her initial purchase was made several years ago, it does not qualify for a credit or subtraction on this year's income tax return.

Example 2. Charles received a loan from his local bank to pay educational expenses for his children. The expenses are considered to have been paid in the year they were made, regardless of when Charles paid back the loan.

Example 3. Last October, Don purchased a computer on credit directly from the computer store. He made two payments on this credit during the year. Don may only include the amounts of the two payments, up to the maximums allowed, as qualifying expenses.

Example 4. Rita's daughter took tutored classes in the fall, but she did not pay for the classes until January of the next year. For both the subtraction and credit, Rita's qualifying expenses must be claimed in the year in which the fee is paid, not when the class is taken.
